

2022 Spring Semester Application Guidelines – Doctoral Program

Department of Medicinal Sciences Graduate School of Pharmaceutical Sciences Kyushu University

1. Admission Policy

The objectives of pharmaceutical sciences are to integrate and deepen sciences for materials and life, and systematically explore sciences related to the environment and the development and proper use of medicines for disease prevention and treatment in order to maintain and improve human health. The research achievements including the technology and techniques would be returned to people, so as to solve various problems in the 21st century in which the society is rapidly aging and people is surrounded by huge numbers of advanced knowledge. To achieve these objectives, the Graduate School of Pharmaceutical Sciences seeks to nurture capable human resources involved in research and education in the field of pharmaceutical sciences.

The Department of Medicinal Sciences aims to promote basic research in the fields of life science, biological information science and medicinal chemistry, as well as develop highly qualified researchers and educators in these fields.

The Department of Medicinal Sciences provides lectures in English for international students. We welcome international students who share our vision and have great motivation and enthusiasm to engage in drug pharmaceutical research. The Graduate School of Medicinal Sciences International Course also welcomes applications from qualified students. Applications must be submitted in accordance with these Guidelines.
